11 HUMBERTO NIETO,

12 Plaintiff,

13 v.

15 NANCY A. BERRYHILL, Acting
16 Commissioner of Social Security,

17 Defendant.
18

} Case No. 8:17-cv-01381-JDE

} MEMORANDUM OPINION AND 13 } ORDER

19 Plaintiff Humberto Nieto ("Plaintiff") filed a Complaint on August 10, 20 2017, seeking review of the Commissioner's denial of his application for 21 disability insurance benefits ("DIB"). The parties filed a Joint Submission ("Jt.
22 Stip.") regarding the issues in dispute on July 13, 2018. The matter now is 23 ready for decision.

24 I.

25 BACKGROUND

26 Plaintiff's claim for DIB has endured a lengthy path. Plaintiff initially 27 filed his claim for DIB in 2007. Administrative Record ("AR") 360-62. In June 28

1 2009, he was found disabled by an Administrative Law Judge (“ALJ”). AR 2 123-35. The Social Security Administration reviewed the decision and 3 determined that Plaintiff’s entitlement to benefits ceased, initially and upon 4 reconsideration, because his health had improved. AR 174-77, 204-06.

5 Plaintiff again sought review before an ALJ. AR 207-08. The ALJ 6 conducted a hearing, and, in April 2013, issued a decision determining 7 Plaintiff’s disability ceased and denying Plaintiff’s claim. AR 58-89, 146-66.
8 The Appeals Council granted Plaintiff’s request for review, found legal error, 9 and reversed and remanded for further proceedings. AR 167-73.

10 On July 11, 2016, an ALJ conducted another hearing. AR 90. Plaintiff, 11 represented by counsel, appeared and testified at the hearing, as did a medical 12 expert, and a vocational expert (“VE”). AR 92-122.

13 On September 1, 2016, the ALJ issued a written decision finding 14 Plaintiff’s disability had ended July 1, 2011. AR 29, 40. The ALJ found that as 15 of the June 2009 disability determination, the comparison point decision 16 (“CPD”), Plaintiff had the following medically determinable impairments: 17 degenerative disc disease of the lumbar spine; right shoulder arthritis; and 18 depression. AR 30. The ALJ recounted that those impairments had resulted in 19 a residual functional capacity (“RFC”) of less than a full range of sedentary 20 work, among other limitations. AR 30. Next, the ALJ found that Plaintiff did 21 not engage in substantial gainful activity through July 1, 2011. Id. The ALJ 22 concluded that the medical evidence established that as of July 2, 2011, 23 Plaintiff suffered from the following medically determinable impairments: 24 degenerative disc disease of the lumbar spine; and degenerative disc disease of 25 the cervical spine. AR 30-31. The ALJ found Plaintiff did not have an 26 impairment or combination of impairments that met or medically equaled a 27 listed impairment since July 1, 2011. AR 31-32. The ALJ found that medical 28 improvement occurred as of July 1, 2011, and the impairments existing at the 1 time of the CPD had decreased in severity to the point where Plaintiff had the 2 RFC to: (1) occasionally lift at least 20 pounds; (2) frequently lift and carry up 3 to 10 pounds (3) stand and walk at least four hours in an eight-hour day; (4) sit 4 for at least six hours in an eight-hour day; and (5) occasionally climb, balance, 5 stoop, kneel, crawl, crouch, and use ladders, ropes or scaffolds. AR 32.

6 The ALJ further found, despite Plaintiff's medical improvement, as of 7 July 1, 2011, he continued to have a severe impairment or combination of 8 impairments that caused more than minimal limitation in his ability to perform 9 basic work activities. AR 33. Nonetheless, the ALJ found, based on the 10 impairments as of July 1, 2011, and through the date of the decision, Plaintiff 11 had the RFC to perform light work with the following limitations: he could 12 (1) occasionally lift at least 20 pounds; (2) frequently lift and carry up to 10 13 pounds; (3) stand and walk at least four hours in an eight-hour day; (4) sit for 14 at least six hours in an eight-hour day; (5) occasionally climb, balance, stoop, 15 kneel, crawl, crouch, and use ladders, ropes or scaffolds; (6) occasionally reach 16 overhead; and (7) frequently handle, reach, and finger. AR 33-37.

17 The ALJ found, as of July 1, 2011, Plaintiff was incapable of performing 18 his past relevant work as a machinist. AR 37. The ALJ also found Plaintiff was 19 a "younger individual" closely approaching advanced age who had limited 20 education, but was able to communicate in English. AR 38. Considering 21 Plaintiff's age, education, work experience, and RFC, the ALJ found jobs 22 existed in significant numbers in the national economy that Plaintiff could 23 perform, including the unskilled occupations of office helper, inspector hand 24 packager, and bench assembler. AR 38-39. Accordingly, the ALJ concluded 25 that Plaintiff's disability ended July 1, 2011, and Plaintiff remained not 26 disabled through the date of the decision. AR 39-40.

27 On June 15, 2017, the Appeals Council denied Plaintiff's request for 28 review, making the ALJ's decision the Commissioner's final decision. AR 1-7.

1 III.

2 LEGAL STANDARDS

3 A. Standard of Review

4 Under 42 U.S.C. § 405(g), a district court may review the 5 Commissioner's decision to deny benefits. The ALJ's findings and decision 6 should be upheld if they are free from legal error and supported by substantial 7 evidence based on the record as a whole. Brown-Hunter v. Colvin, 806 F.3d
8 487, 492 (9th Cir. 2015) (as amended); Parra v. Astrue, 481 F.3d 742, 746 (9th 9 Cir. 2007). Substantial evidence means such relevant evidence as a reasonable 10 person might accept as adequate to support a conclusion. Lingenfelter v.
11 Astrue, 504 F.3d 1028, 1035 (9th Cir. 2007). It is more than a scintilla, but less 12 than a preponderance. Id. To determine whether substantial evidence supports 13 a finding, the reviewing court "must review the administrative record as a 14 whole, weighing both the evidence that supports and the evidence that detracts 15 from the Commissioner's conclusion." Reddick v. Chater, 157 F.3d 715, 720 16 (9th Cir. 1998). "If the evidence can reasonably support either affirming or 17 reversing," the reviewing court "may not substitute its judgment" for that of 18 the Commissioner. Id. at 720-21; see also Molina v. Astrue, 674 F.3d 1104, 19 1111 (9th Cir. 2012) ("Even when the evidence is susceptible to more than one 20 rational interpretation, [the court] must uphold the ALJ's findings if they are 21 supported by inferences reasonably drawn from the record.").

22 Lastly, even when the ALJ commits legal error, the Court upholds the 23 decision where that error is harmless. Id. at 1115. An error is harmless if it is 24 "inconsequential to the ultimate nondisability determination," or if "the 25 agency's path may reasonably be discerned, even if the agency explains its 26 decision with less than ideal clarity." Brown-Hunter, 806 F.3d at 492 (citation 27 omitted).

1 B. Standard for Determining Disability Benefits

2 When the claimant's case has proceeded to consideration by an ALJ, the 3 ALJ conducts a five-step sequential evaluation to determine at each step if the 4 claimant is or is not disabled. See Molina, 674 F.3d at 1110.

5 First, the ALJ considers whether the claimant currently works at a job 6 that meets the criteria for "substantial gainful activity." Id. If not, the ALJ 7 proceeds to a second step to determine whether the claimant has a "severe" 8 medically determinable physical or mental impairment or combination of 9 impairments that has lasted for more than 12 months. Id. If so, the ALJ 10 proceeds to a third step to determine whether the claimant's impairments 11 render the claimant disabled because they "meet or equal" any of the "listed 12 impairments" set forth in the Social Security regulations at 20 C.F.R. Part 404, 13 Subpart P, Appendix 1. See Rounds v. Comm'r Soc. Sec. Admin., 807 F.3d
14 996, 1001 (9th Cir. 2015).

15 If the claimant's impairments do not meet or equal a "listed 16 impairment," before proceeding to the fourth step the ALJ assesses the 17 claimant's RFC, that is, what the claimant can do on a sustained basis despite 18 the limitations from his impairments. See 20 C.F.R. §§ 404.1520(a)(4), 19 416.920(a)(4); Social Security Ruling ("SSR") 96-8p. After determining the 20 claimant's RFC, the ALJ proceeds to the fourth step and determines whether 21 the claimant has the RFC to perform his past relevant work, either as he 22 "actually" performed it when he worked in the past, or as that same job is 23 "generally" performed in the national economy. See Stacy v. Colvin, 825 F.3d
24 563, 569 (9th Cir. 2016).

25 If the claimant cannot perform his past relevant work, the ALJ proceeds 26 to a fifth and final step to determine whether there is any other work, in light of 27 the claimant's RFC, age, education, and work experience, that the claimant 28 can perform and that exists in "significant numbers" in either the national or

1 regional economies. See Tackett v. Apfel, 180 F.3d 1094, 1100-01 (9th Cir.
2 1999). If the claimant can do other work, he is not disabled; but if the claimant 3 cannot do other work and meets the duration requirement, the claimant is 4 disabled. See Id. at 1099.

5 The claimant generally bears the burden at each of steps one through 6 four to show that he is disabled, or that he meets the requirements to proceed 7 to the next step; and the claimant bears the ultimate burden to show that he is 8 disabled. See, e.g., Molina, 674 F.3d at 1110; Johnson v. Shalala, 60 F.3d
9 1428, 1432 (9th Cir. 1995). However, at Step Five, the ALJ has a “limited” 10 burden of production to identify representative jobs that the claimant can 11 perform and that exist in “significant” numbers in the economy. See Hill v.
12 Astrue, 698 F.3d 1153, 1161 (9th Cir. 2012); Tackett, 180 F.3d at 1100.

13 IV.

14 DISCUSSION

15 The parties present two disputed issues (Jt. Stip. at 6):

16 Issue No. 1: Whether the ALJ properly determined that Plaintiff is 17 literate; and

18 Issue No. 2: Whether the ALJ properly considered Plaintiff’s subjective 19 testimony about his limitations.

20 A. Literacy Finding

21 Plaintiff alleges the ALJ erred in finding Plaintiff is able to communicate 22 in English. Jt. Stip. at 6-12. Plaintiff contends he is “in fact” illiterate. Jt. Stip.
23 at 7. Plaintiff also points out that the ALJ in the 2009 decision found Plaintiff 24 illiterate, and contends that the ALJ in the instant decision “does nothing in 25 the [2016] decision to rebut the finding.” Jt. Stip. at 10, citing AR 134.

26 1. Applicable Law

27 Social Security regulations take into account English literacy and the 28 ability to communicate in English when determining a claimant’s education as

1 a vocational factor. 20 C.F.R. § 404.1564(b)(5). The ability to communicate in 2 English is important because “English is the dominant language of [this] 3 country” and as such, retaining a job may be difficult for someone without 4 English skills “regardless of the amount of education the person may have in 5 another language.” Id. However, “[w]hile illiteracy or the inability to 6 communicate in English may significantly limit an individual’s vocational 7 scope, the primary work functions in the bulk of unskilled work relate to 8 working with things (rather than with data or people) and in these work 9 functions at the unskilled level, literacy or ability to communicate in English 10 has the least significance.” 20 C.F.R. Pt. 404, Subpt. P, App. 2, § 201.00(I).

11 The Commissioner considers a claimant “illiterate if the person cannot 12 read or write a simple message such as instructions or inventory lists even 13 though the person can sign his or her name. Generally, an illiterate person has 14 had little or no formal schooling.” 20 C.F.R. §§ 404.1564(b)(1). Literacy or 15 education level is relevant only to the step five inquiry and not to existence of a 16 disability; thus, the Commissioner bears the burden of establishing whether a 17 claimant is literate. Silveira v. Apfel, 204 F.3d 1257, 1261 & n.14 (9th Cir.
18 2000) (en banc).

19 2. Analysis

20 At Step Five, the ALJ determined Plaintiff “has a limited education and 21 is able to communicate in English.” AR 38. The Commissioner points to 22 several factors supporting this determination.

23 First, the ALJ noted that, while Plaintiff used a Spanish interpreter at the 24 hearing, he was able to participate in the consultative psychiatric examination 25 without an interpreter. AR 38. Indeed, in October 2011, Plaintiff took part in a 26 consultative psychiatric evaluation with Dr. Sohini Parikh. The doctor 27 reported that his source of information for the examination was Plaintiff, “who 28 speaks English.” AR 630. The doctor also found Plaintiff was attentive and 1 oriented, and his speech was “spontaneous with a good vocabulary.” AR 633.

2 The doctor further stated that Plaintiff’s voice was “normal in tone, rate, and 3 rhythm.” Id. Accordingly, the ALJ’s reliance on Plaintiff’s ability to 4 communicate during the examination is supported by the record. See, e.g., 5 Decovich v. Colvin, 2015 WL 3559128, at *9 (D. Nev. June 5, 2015) (ALJ 6 properly found claimant was able to communicate in English in part because 7 she spoke English during consultative examination).

8 Next, the ALJ noted Plaintiff was taking English classes at the local 9 community college. AR 38. In March 2011, Plaintiff appeared at an in-person 10 continuing disability review reconsideration interview. Plaintiff answered a 11 question about whether he had “received any education since [his] last 12 disability decision” in the affirmative, stating that he was going to school and 13 “[l]earning English.” AR 384. Later, in an August 2011 disability report, 14 Plaintiff stated, “I go to English classes at Centennial College, thru [sic] 15 Rancho Santiago College” AR 405. The ALJ properly relied on Plaintiff’s 16 education in assessing his literacy.¹ See, e.g., Flores v. Astrue, 2011 WL 17 13143148, at *5 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 19, 2011) (ALJ properly determination that 18 claimant was illiterate but still capable of understanding verbal elementary 19 English in part because claimant took English classes at the community 20 college), aff’d, 546 F. App’x 638 (9th Cir. 2013).

21 The Commissioner points to additional evidence before the ALJ
22 supporting the determination. For example, at the 2009 administrative hearing, 23 Plaintiff stated that he spoke and read “a little bit” of English. AR 55-56. By 24 the time of the March 2011 interview, the Agency interviewer noted Plaintiff

25
26 ¹ In 2009, the ALJ made a one-line finding that Plaintiff was illiterate. AR 134.
27 Here, the ALJ articulated reasons supporting the literacy finding, which included 28 developments since the last finding. AR 38. Contrary to Plaintiff’s assertion, the ALJ did not “do[] nothing in the decision to rebut the [prior] finding.” Jt. Stip. at 10.

1 could “speak and understand English.” AR 376. Again, at an April 2012
2 continuing disability review hearing, a hearing officer observed that Plaintiff 3 “was able to understand and respond to all questions in an appropriate 4 manner.” AR 195. The officer further noted “[t]he Hearing was conducted in 5 English, and no difficulty with communication or understanding was noted.”
6 Id. Finally, at the 2013 hearing, the ALJ commented that Plaintiff understood 7 English fairly well at the prior hearings, and Plaintiff confirmed he did, but 8 stated he understands English better than he can speak it. AR 60. The 9 Commissioner also notes that Plaintiff lived in the United States since 1980
10 and worked for many years as a machinist. Jt. Stip. at 13-14; AR 631. The VE 11 testified that this was semi-skilled work (AR 112), and the Dictionary of 12 Occupational Titles (“DOT”) classifies the occupation as “language level 3.”² 13 DOT § 600.380-018, 1991 WL 684684. Plaintiff’s ability to work at this 14 language level for a lengthy period of time is further evidence of his literacy.

15 For the reasons outlined above, the Commissioner has met her burden of 16 showing that the literacy determination is supported by substantial evidence.

17 B. Plaintiff’s Subjective Symptom Testimony

18 In Issue No. 2, Plaintiff argues the ALJ improperly discounted her 19 subjective symptom testimony.

20 1. Applicable Law

21 Where a disability claimant produces objective medical evidence of an 22 underlying impairment that could reasonably be expected to produce the pain

23
24 ² This language level requires the ability to (1) read “a variety of novels, magazines, 25 atlases, [e]ncyclopedias[,] . . . safety rules, instructions in the use and maintenance of 26 shop tools and equipment, and methods and procedures in mechanical drawing and 27 layout work” (2) write “reports and essays with proper format, punctuation, spelling, 28 and grammar, using all parts of speech”; and (3) speak “before an audience with poise, voice control, and confidence, using correct English and a well-modulated voice.” 1991 WL 684684.

1 or other symptoms alleged, absent evidence of malingering, the ALJ must 2 provide “‘specific, clear and convincing reasons for’ rejecting the claimant’s 3 testimony regarding the severity of the claimant’s symptoms.” Treichler v.
4 Comm’r Soc. Sec. Admin., 775 F.3d 1090, 1102 (9th Cir. 2014) (citation 5 omitted); Moisa v. Barnhart, 367 F.3d 882, 885 (9th Cir. 2004); see also 20 6 C.F.R. § 416.929. The ALJ’s findings “must be sufficiently specific to allow a 7 reviewing court to conclude that the [ALJ] rejected [the] claimant’s testimony 8 on permissible grounds and did not arbitrarily discredit the claimant’s 9 testimony.” Moisa, 367 F.3d at 885 (citation omitted). However, if the ALJ’s 10 assessment of the claimant’s testimony is reasonable and is supported by 11 substantial evidence, it is not the Court’s role to “second-guess” it. See Rollins 12 v. Massanari, 261 F.3d 853, 857 (9th Cir. 2001). Finally, the ALJ’s credibility 13 finding may be upheld even if not all of the ALJ’s reasons for rejecting the 14 claimant’s testimony are upheld. See Batson v. Comm’r Soc. Sec. Admin., 359 15 F.3d 1190, 1197 (9th Cir. 2004).

16 2. Analysis

17 During the 2009 hearing, Plaintiff testified he stopped working because 18 he had pain that starts in his neck and travels down his back, and eventually 19 causes throbbing in this leg. AR 49-50. He had surgery (in 2005 (AR 568)), 20 which “improved [his condition] a lot,” but still had problems. AR 52. He 21 could stand for 10 to 20 minutes, left about eight pounds, could not walk much 22 and could control his pain by lying down about five times a day. AR 53.

23 At the 2013 hearing, Plaintiff stated that his surgery helped “a little bit,” 24 but he still had pain. AR 63. He walked for about 30 minutes a day and did 25 exercises, which helped, but certain exercises and running exacerbated his back 26 problems. AR 63, 68-69. He had pain and numbness down his back to his hips, 27 which prevented him from standing or sitting for more than 20 to 25 minutes.
28 AR 64-65, 72, 77. He had weakness in his hands. AR 78. He helped around the 1 house by making the bed, sweeping, doing laundry, preparing breakfast for his 2 children, and driving or walking them to and from school. AR 65, 67, 72-73, 3 75. He dressed himself and helped his wife at the store. AR 74. He could lift 4 five or six pounds. AR 69. He had mood problems and depression. AR 69. He 5 took medication for his depression, but it was prescribed only in the prior three 6 months. AR 69-70. He slept better on this medication, which reduced his pain 7 level reduces from level six or seven to about level three. AR 70-71. One of his 8 doctors recommended a second surgery, but his primary care doctor said he 9 recommended against surgery. AR 71. Plaintiff recounted he also took part in 10 physical therapy and received injections. AR 77.

11 At the 2016 hearing, Plaintiff testified that if he lifted something heavy, 12 he would not move the next day. AR 103. He walked regularly for exercise, 13 but could stand only for about 30 minutes before needing to sit down and put 14 his feet up; after laying down, he has to straighten his back. AR 107-09. He 15 could lift and carry about three pounds. AR 107. He was last treated for his 16 back pain two years ago. AR 110. He had received injections; his doctor 17 recommended something more, but he had not undertaken further treatment.
18 AR 110. He could still be able to help his wife with shopping and household 19 chores, and sometimes prepared meals. AR 106-07. He could drive for about 20 an hour-and-a-half. AR 107-08. He received no mental health treatment and he 21 was not then taking medication for depression. AR 105-06.

22 The ALJ found Plaintiff's medically determinable impairments could 23 reasonably be expected to cause the alleged symptoms, but his statements 24 "concerning the intensity, persistence[,] and limiting effects of these symptoms 25 [were] not entirely consistent with the objective medical evidence and other 26 evidence," for the reasons explained in the decision. AR 34. The ALJ offered 27 at least three reasons for discounting Plaintiff's subjective symptom testimony: 28 (1) conflict with the objective evidence and other evidence in the record; (2)

1 conservative treatment; and (3) Plaintiff's activities of daily living. AR 26-27.
2 As explained below, the ALJ provided legally sufficient reasons for 3 discrediting Plaintiff's subjective symptom testimony.

4 First, the ALJ discredited Plaintiff's symptom testimony because his 5 allegations were not supported by objective medical evidence. AR 34-37.
6 "Although lack of medical evidence cannot form the sole basis for discounting 7 pain testimony, it is a factor that the ALJ can consider in his credibility 8 analysis." Burch v. Barnhart, 400 F.3d 676, 681 (9th Cir. 2005); see also 9 Rollins, 261 F.3d at 857. The record shows numerous objective findings and 10 conclusions that conflict with Plaintiff's allegations of total disability. For 11 example, (1) psychological examinations showed mild findings (AR 569-70, 12 633); (2) physical examination findings showed normal range of motion, 13 normal muscle strength, normal reflexes, and normal gait (AR 569-70, 623-24, 14 704, 734, 798); (3) diagnostic testing, including MRIs and x-rays, showed mild 15 degenerative disc disease (AR 140, 570-71, 609, 729-32, 895); (4) orthopedic 16 examiner Dr. Timothy Ross found Plaintiff "exhibited subjective tenderness 17 which outweigh[ed] objective findings" (AR 571); (5) Dr. Ross noted 18 "[l]imited effort" rendered by Plaintiff on his range of motion testing (AR 569); 19 (6) Dr. Ross found straight leg raising test was negative in the seated position 20 to 90 degrees, despite Plaintiff's complaints "of lower back pain in the supine 21 position at 10 degrees" (AR 569-70); and (7) Plaintiff's psychiatric evaluation 22 was largely unremarkable, revealed a high level of functioning, and showed 23 that Plaintiff "did not seem to have any impairment in the ability to reason and 24 make social, occupational, and personal adjustments" (AR 630-36). In light of 25 this evidence, the ALJ properly considered inconsistency with the objective 26 medical evidence as one of at least two valid factors supporting the decision to 27 discount Plaintiff's symptom testimony. See Burch, 400 F.3d at 681.

1 Second, the ALJ discredited Plaintiff's symptom testimony because he 2 received conservative treatment. AR 34-35. The treatment a claimant received, 3 especially when conservative, is a legitimate consideration in a credibility 4 finding. See Parra, 481 F.3d at 750-51 ("evidence of conservative treatment is 5 sufficient to discount a claimant's testimony regarding severity of an 6 impairment"). Since his 2005 surgery, Plaintiff largely reported to his 7 physicians, as he did at the 2013 hearing, that his pain was level three or less.
8 AR 70-71, 526, 529, 532, 535, 589-90, 598, 601, 604, 607, 624, 665, 669, 681.
9 Further, he was often prescribed non-prescription pain medication, 10 experienced relief from over-the-counter medication, or was taking no 11 medication at all. AR 63, 104-05, 568, 635, 672, 677, 682, 701, 710-11. See 12 Meanel v. Apfel, 172 F.3d 1111, 1114 (9th Cir. 1999) (ALJ properly 13 considered physician's failure to prescribe, and claimant's failure to request, 14 medical treatment commensurate with the "supposedly excruciating pain" 15 alleged); see also Lindquist v. Colvin, 588 F. App'x 544, 547 (9th Cir. 2014) 16 (ALJ properly discounted claimant's testimony in part because symptoms were 17 controlled by medication). Moreover, as Plaintiff acknowledged at the 18 hearings, he participated in physical therapy, and walking, exercise, and other 19 conservative treatments helped. AR 51-52, 63, 73, 77, 107, 677, 682.
20 Tommasetti v. Astrue, 533 F.3d 1035, 1040 (9th Cir. 2008) (ALJ properly 21 rejected claimant's subjective complaints where medical records showed that 22 she responded favorably to conservative treatment of physical therapy and 23 medication); Kumar v. Berryhill, 2017 WL 6028701, at *2 (C.D. Cal. Dec. 5, 24 2017) (credibility determination supported in part because claimant received 25 essentially conservative treatment, such as physical therapy, medication, 26 walking regime, and stretching). The ALJ's finding regarding conservative 27 treatment was a clear and convincing reason to discount Plaintiff's statements 28 of a disabling condition. See Tommasetti, 533 F.3d at 1040; Fair v. Bowen,

1 885 F.2d 597, 604 (9th Cir. 1989) (finding that the claimant’s allegations of 2 persistent, severe pain and discomfort were belied by conservative treatment).

3 Third, the ALJ also discounted Plaintiff’s subjective symptom testimony 4 based on his daily activities, specifically, his ability to help out around the 5 house and run errands. AR 35. The Ninth Circuit has “repeatedly warned that 6 ALJs must be inconsistent with testimony about pain, because impairments 7 that would unquestionably preclude work and all the pressures of a workplace 8 environment will often be consistent with doing more than merely resting in 9 bed all day.” Garrison v. Colvin, 759 F.3d 995, 1016 (9th Cir. 2014); Vertigan 10 v. Halter, 260 F.3d 1044, 1050 (9th Cir. 2001) (“This court has repeatedly 11 asserted that the mere fact that a plaintiff has carried on certain daily activities, 12 such as grocery shopping, driving a car, or limited walking for exercise, does 13 not in any way detract from her credibility as to her overall disability.”).
14 “[O]nly if his level of activity [was] inconsistent with [a claimant’s] claimed 15 limitations would these activities have any bearing on his credibility.”
16 Garrison, 759 F.3d at 1016

17 Here, without reaching the issue, even if the ALJ erred in relying on 18 Plaintiff’s activities of daily living as a basis for discounting his symptom 19 testimony, as long as there remains “substantial evidence supporting the ALJ’s 20 conclusions” and the error “does not negate the validity of the ALJ’s ultimate 21 [credibility] conclusion,” the error is deemed harmless and does not warrant 22 reversal. Batson, 359 F.3d at 1195-97; Williams v. Comm’r, Soc. Sec. Admin., 23 2018 WL 1709505, at *3 (D. Or. Apr. 9, 2018) (“Because the ALJ is only 24 required to provide a single valid reason for rejecting a claimant’s pain 25 complaints, any one of the ALJ’s reasons would be sufficient to affirm the 26 overall credibility determination.”)

27 The Court finds that ALJ provided sufficiently specific, clear, and 28 convincing reasons for discounting Plaintiff’s symptom testimony, specifically,

1 the conflict with objective medical evidence and other evidence in the record, 2 which cannot be the only ground, and Plaintiff's conservative treatment, in 3 discounting Plaintiff's subjective symptom testimony. Those grounds, together, 4 are sufficient to affirm the ALJ's decision on the issue.
